The body of Tony W. Bears, for whom the American Legion post at Clearmont was named, has been returned from France, according to a telegram from the War Department to Mrs. Nettie Bears, the soldier's mother. The body arrived at Hoboken, N. J., yesterday, and will be sent from there to Clearmont. The date of its arrival is not yet known.

Tony W. Bears was one of the first Nodaway County boys to die in battle in the war with Germany. He entered the service at Camp Funston, October 3, 1917, and sailed for France on February 26, 1918. He was killed in action July 20, 1918. He was a member of Company B, 103d Infantry, Twenty-Sixth Division.

The body will not be buried at Clearmont, but will be taken to the old home of the Bears family at Mount Moriah in Harrison County. The funeral services will be held there, and the body will be buried by the side of the soldier's father, who died several years ago.

The members of the Tony W. Bears Post of the American Legion at Clearmont will accompany the body to Mount Moriah and have charge of the services at the church, and the American Legion post of Bethany will have charge of the ceremonies at the graye.

Efforts are being made to secure the Rev. R. R. Watts, former pastor of the Clearmont Baptist Church, to preach the funeral sermon.

PEACE HOPE STILL SEEN IN REPLY OF SINN FEIN

Eamonn De Valera is Unanimously Reelected President of Irish Republic.

Dublin, Aug. 26.—Eamonn DeValera today was unanimously elected president of the Irish Republic by the Sinn Fein Parliament. All seats in the session of the parliament were taken and 5,000 were turned away. De Valera was wildly cheered when he entered the room.

All members of the Sinn Fein cabinet were re-elected. Michael Collins, Commander-in-Chief of the Irish Republican army, moved to float new loans of $20,000,000 in the United States and $2,000,000 in Ireland.

London, Aug. 26.—While the Sinn Fein Parliament has rejected Lloyd George's peace proposals, the Irish Republicans are willing to continue negotiations through a peace commission, it was revealed today when the text of DeValera's reply was published.

"The Sinn Fein Parliament by a unanimous vote rejected the peace proposals of your government," says the reply. "However, if, on a broad basis, peace can be secured, we will appoint negotiators."

COCAINE IS STOLEN FROM OFFICE OF DR. R. C. PERSON

Theft of 90 Grains of Drug Thought to Have Been Committed Tuesday.

Fresh revelation of the activities of a drug addict was made today by Dr. R. C. Person, who reports the loss of forty tablets of cocaine taken from his office. The tablets were of 2½ grain size, making the total quantity stolen 90 grains.

The cocaine was missed from Dr. Person's office early Wednesday morning by Miss Neva Sage, his assistant, but she did not report the loss to the doctor until yesterday, supposing he had the narcotic in his satchel. The empty bottle was left in the office.

The drug is supposed to have been taken from the office during the noon hour Tuesday, the same day that 100 grains of cocaine and a like quantity of morphine was taken from the office of Dr. H. S. Dowell. Dr. Person had no morphine in his office. The cocaine was used by him as a local anesthetic.

MINISTER-LAWYER FILES FIRST CASE

DR. O. L. CURL IS ATTORNEY IN EJECTMENT SUIT.

TOMORROW IS LAST DAY

Suits Must Be Filed Immediately for Service for September Term of Court.

Dr. O. L. Curl, pastor of the First M. E. church of this city, who was admitted to the practice of law here last spring, today filed his first case here as attorney. He is attorney for the plaintiff in the case of Oscar Mowry vs. George T. Alben for ejectment. The petition states the defendant is unlawfully withholding a strip of ground about 40 feet wide belonging to the plaintiff. Damages for $100 and the monthly value of the land in rent, $2, are asked by the plaintiff. Associated with Dr. Curl in this case are Cook & Cummins.

Alfred Owens brought an injunction against E. M. Willhoyte and C. F. Fleming. The plaintiff seeks to enjoin and to restrain the defendants from operating tanks for oils, gasoline, etc., which the plaintiff alleges are operated at the intersection of Craig and Railroad streets adjacent to Owens' property in Hopkins. All the parties live in Hopkins.

A divorce suit was filed by Mabel Woodman against Robert C. Woodman. They were married May 29, 1917, at Clarinda and lived together until May, 1920. The petition alleges the husband would beat and strike his wife; that he failed to provide for her; and that the defendant at the present time is serving a sentence in the Iowa state penitentiary.

A suit by Archie A. Armstrong & Son against C. D. and E. F. Caldwell for $1,050 was filed. The petition states the defendants purchased a two-year-old blooded heifer from the plaintiffs June 17, 1920, and after the delivery of the animal the defendants have failed and neglected to pay for same.

As tomorrow is the last day of service for the September term of circuit court for all suits except notes and accounts, it is expected that several suits will be filed late this afternoon and tomorrow.

INVADING MINERS AWAITED WITH BOMBS, MACHINE GUNS

Officials Deliver Ultimatum to Union Men—Will Be Halted by Federal Troops.

Charleston, Aug. 26.—Following a conference between Governor Morgan, Maj. Gen. Bandholtz, C. F. Keeney, president of district seventeen of the United Mine Workers, and Fred Mooney, secretary of the district miners, Keeney and Mooney this afternoon are speeding in an auto at breakneck speed for Madison to intercept the union miners' army with an ultimatum that unless they abandon their march and disperse federal troops will forcibly halt them. The trip to Madison is 75 miles.

Washington, Aug. 26.—There is no immediate necessity for troops in West Virginia, General H. S. Bandholtz, who was sent to West Virginia to investigate, reported to the War Department today. He recommended, however, that troops be held in readiness.

Madison, Aug. 26.—C. F. Keeney, of Charleston, president of district seventeen of the United Mine Workers, left there today for Logan in an attempt to head off an invasion there of 5,000 armed union miners. Keeney said that he had been advised that the Logan sheriff had machine guns planted covering all roads and that airplanes loaded with bombs were flying overhead. At attempt to march into Logan, he said, would probably mean a massacre of the union miners force.

GOOD SPEECHES AT FARMERS' PICNIC

JUDGE DONNELL EXPLAINS GRAIN MARKETING PLAN

IS PULLING OUT OF HOLE

Farmer Need Not be Afraid, Says H. J. Waters, Because World Depends on Him.

Farm families from every community in the county came to Maryville today to attend the second day of the farmers' picnic being held in College Park. The marketing and general farm talks for the men and the talks and demonstrations on household problems for the farm women made the day a profitable one for the visitors, and the basket dinner at noon and baseball game later in the day furnished the recreational part of the program.

Judge P. E. Donnell, a director of the United States Grain Growers Inc., explained the plan of marketing of that nation wide organization.

"Since we have begun to study our marketing problems from a business standpoint the wonder of the whole thing is why we had not started this marketing program ten years ago," said Mr. Donnell. "We, as farmers, are inclined to get a little impatient that the Grain Growers Incorporated are not ready to handle our own crop this year, but when we think of this as the biggest business operation that has ever been attempted in the marketing of one farm commodity, we are pleased that it is really expected to begin operation as soon.

"To think that the money to handle the American grain crop will equal the money required to handle the Standard Oil Co., we then see the magnitude of this marketing program, but I am convinced that the farmers can raise plenty of money to handle the marketing program.

"At a meeting of the legislature in Iowa the governor of that state in his message to the legislature told them that the people of Iowa had bought $200,000,000 worth of fake stock in the past 5 years. It is safe to say that i fthe people of Iowa bought $200,000,000 of fake stock, the Iowa farmers bought $100,000,000 of this. $1,000,00,000 is the committee's estimate of capital required to handle the entire grain crop of America. The thing we farmers have got to do then instead of buying fake stock is to invest our surplus funds in the marketing of our own products."

Waters' Address.

"The farmer needn't be afraid of producing too much because he is the only man who produces something that we all have to have and for which he gets spot cash," said H. J. Waters, editor of the Weekly Kansas City Star, in his address following that of Judge Donnell.

"No one is so bad off as the man who has nothing to sell, unless, it is the man who has something that won't sell; and no one is so well off as the man who can sell for spot cash. We can make last year's suit do for another year; we can get by with last years automobile; but we can't make yesterday's dinner do for today."

"There are 110,000,000 people in

Every home in the county will be canvassed, and as the records are compiled it will be possible to know the religious condition of the county. The information received will be utilized in the revival meetings to follow. The canvassers will leave a circular in each home, explaining in detail the evangelistic program of the county.

The revival meetings, with the dates that have been definitely arranged are as follows:

Gaynor, September 4, B. D. Gillispie.

Ravenwood, September 11, B. L. Wray Company.

Pickering, September 25, Jas Small Co.

OHIO BOOTLEGGERS NET BIG PROFITS

$11,000,000 TOLL IS TAKEN BY TWELVE PLYING RUM TRADE

SOLD AT .50 PER GULP

One "Flavoring Extract" Dealer Sought to Buy Alcohol in Carlot Lots.

By William J. Huske

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—Twelve Cleveland manufacturing concerns have been practically put out of business recently by Federal officials charged with enforcement of the Volstead act, but before this was done they made profits of more than $11,000,000 in the illicit sale of alcohol to the bootlegging trade of Northern Ohio, according to a statement by W. A. Weygandt, Federal prohibition agent in charge of inspection among manufacturing concerns, drug stores and physicians.

These twelve concerns, according to Weygandt, did a business that would make a Western land office in the days of the "dirt" craze envious, and the profits they charged on their stuff would make Captain Kidd or any of the pirates of an older and more moderate day turn in their graves.

Sold at 50c. per Gulp.

At least 90,000 gallons of alcohol, according to his figures for which manufacturers of "hair tonic" or "flavoring extract" paid $6 per gallon ultimately found its way down the dusty throat of some bootlegger's customer at fifty cents per gulp, showing the tidy margin between manufacturer's cost and the price paid by the consumer of $11,000,000.

Activities of the enforcement branch of the Federal and State Governments have not tended to discourage the activities of "manufacturers," Weygandt says. One man wants to start a "flavoring extract" plant and has an application pending for a permit to buy alcohol in carload lots.

"I do things on a big scale," he explains, with an airy wave of the hand. "Don't get the idea that I'm a piker".

This carload shipment would not run this "plant" a year or a month, when he gets going good. "I expect to use at least a carload a week" he told the inspector.

Bogus Invoices Made Out

Among the methods used by some of these manufacturers to escape detection was the sending broadcast to druggist and others of receipted "invoices," acknowledging payment for goods never ordered and never received. Retail pharmacists all over northern Ohio have received these bogus "invoices" it was said.

One concern, which is reputed to have made a profit of one million dollars last year, shipped 442 gallons of "hair tonic" in one month to a town boasting a population of 8,000. There was enough "tonic" in that burg to use well toward a pint on the head of every man, woman and child in the town.

"Not all manufacturers of barbers' supplies and flavoring extracts are engaged in the illicit trade," Weygandt said. "Many of them are doing a legitimate business, but this has been one of the loopholes most frequently and profitably used by those seeking fortune if not fame through the breaking of the prohibition law."

OBITUARY

Clara Helen White was born near Ottumwa, Ia, Oct. 18, 1870, and departed from this life at her home in Barnard Aug. 21, 1921, at 2:15 in the morning. She was 50 years, ten months, and six days old.

When a child she moved from Iowa with her parents to Madison, Kansas, where she grew to womanhood.

In the year 1890 she was united in marriage to John S. Beattie. To this union were born three children, two of whom died in infancy.

The same year of her marriage she moved with her husband to a farm in Nodaway county, five miles north of Barnard, where she labored and toiled as a faithful wife and mother.

In early life she confessed her faith in Christ and accepted him as her Savious and Redeemer. She united with the Elman Derrell Presbyterian church of Linn County, Kansas and died triumphant in the faith.

For fifteen years she has been a loyal member of the Rebekahs and her life has been a living witness to the principles of that order. Twice she was elected a delegate to the State Convention.

Six years ago she suffered a stroke of paralysis and from that time on she never was strong again. During the intervening years her body suffered two more strokes that left her an invalid. She was a constant sufferer but through all the years of her sickness she never complained but bore it all with Christian fortitude and love. She loved the teachings of her Christ and made Him her constant companion.

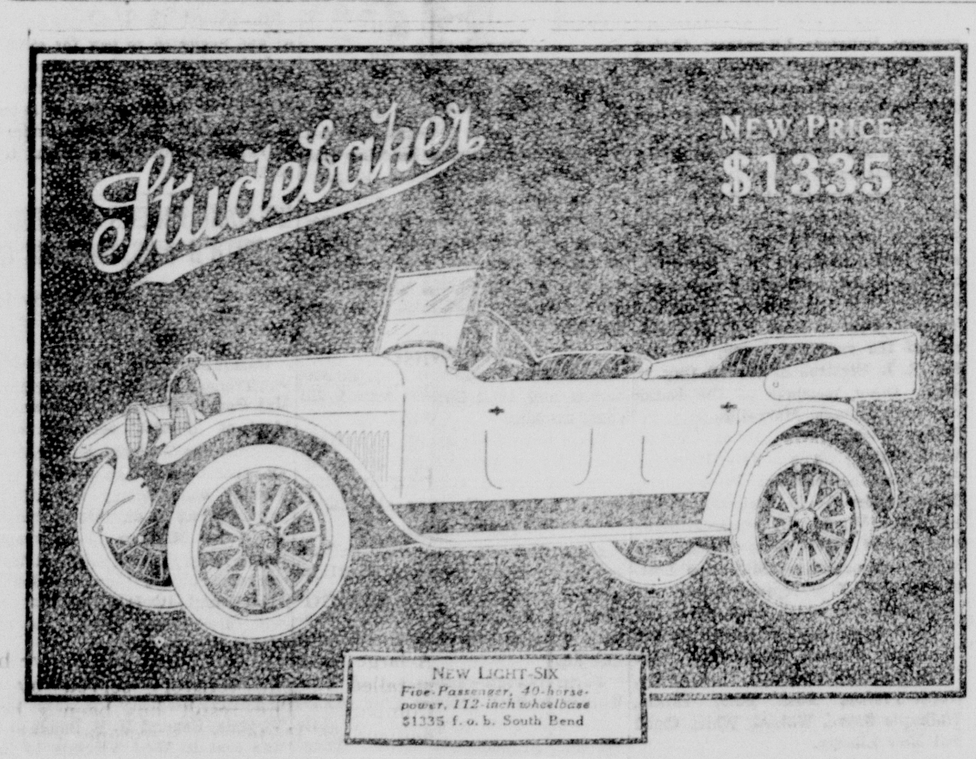
Her generosity was unbounded and her hospitality beautiful. She had a pleasing personality and during the thirteen years of her residence in Barnard she made a host of friends; in fact, if she had an enemy she did not know it.

She was faithful wife, a loving mother, and all that a neighbor could be. She will be greatly missed, not only by the immediate family but by the community at large.

Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn her, one daughter, Mrs. Jennie Davidson, of Barnard; one sister, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Gage, of Hildreth, Neb; one brother, Frank B. White of Cody, Wyo.; many other relatives and a host of friends.

Her funeral was conducted from the Methodist Episcopal Church, Thursday, Aug.25 at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The Rev. Arthur L. Olsen, a former pastor, officiated. The Rebekahs had charge of the service at the graveside. Interment was in the Masonic cemetery, where she was tenderly laid to rest.

Her end was peace.



NEW LIGHT-SIX
Five-Passenger, 40-horsepower, 112-inch wheelbase
$1335 f. o. b. South Bend

THE unprecedented popularity of the NEW LIGHT-SIX can be traced to the fact that it represents a degree of automobile value that the public has sought for years. It is built complete in the great Studebaker factories in South Bend. And the best indication of its real worth today, is to be found in the fact that, in the first six months of 1921, Studebaker (with the exception of one manufacturer of a well known and very low-priced car) produced and sold more cars than any other manufacturer in the country.

DEMOCRATS WANT OPEN DISCUSSIONS

DEMAND DISARMAMENT CONFERENCES SHALL NOT BE SECRET

BORAH SHOULD BE NAMED

Idaho Senator, With Support of Democrats Responsible For Coming Parley.

By Richard Linthicum
(Special Correspondence)

Washington, Aug. 26.—Senator Pat Harrison rendered a distinct public service when he introduced an amendment to a rider-appropriation of $200,000 to pay the expenses of the disarmament conference, the amendment providing "that the delegates representing the government of the United States use every effort and exert their influence for open session at the conference."

Senator Harrison also suggested the appointment of Senator Borah to the disarmament conference and eulogized the Idaho Senator for his victory in passing the disarmament resolution against the prolonged opposition of his (the Republican) party. While Senator Harrison complimented Senator Lodge, the Republican leader of the Senate, upon his appointment as a member of the disarmament conference; he also rasped the Republican Senator by an inference to Senator Lodge's unfriendly attitude in the past toward disarmament.

Despite Senator Lodge's statement that he had not changed his views on the limitation of armament, but had always favored it, his entire record, especially on army and navy bills and his venomous opposition to the Treaty of Versailles containing a scientific method for world disarmament justifies the remarks of Senator Harrison.

The amendment favoring open sessions of the forthcoming disarmament conference is also likely to disturb the equanimity of the Massachusetts Senator in his capacity as a member of the disarmament conference as well as his colleagues who have been free in their criticism of alleged secrecy at the Paris Peace Conference, but they have no word of protest against the informal negotiations now being secretly conducted between this country and Germany for a separate peace—the kind of peace against which Mr. Lodge has vehemently protested and which he declared would brand us with everlasting dishonor.

Nothing, however, is to be gained by accusing Senator Lodge of inconsistency in these matters because he has been on every side of the question of disarmament and the treaty-making power.

Lodge Versus Lodge Again.

Recently when Senator Lodge was accused by Senator Harrison of having insisted that the Senate had a right to have its say in advance of an actual signing of the Peace Treaty, the Massachusetts Senator replied:

"That was not the case. I have said, and with some energy, that we were entitled to have all the information about the negotiations (with Germany) after the treaty was presented."

On March 19, 1919, Senator Lodge in his debate with President Lowell of Harvard University said:

"If the President had laid that draft before the Senate as other Presidents have done; if he had said to the Senate, 'I submit this draft to you for your advice, I hope for your approval and for such suggestions as you may have to make,' he would have had the amendments laid before him to present to the Peace Conference in Paris. The battle would have been more than half won by the mere submission."

This speech, made before the first draft of the Treaty of Versailles was completed, proves the truth of Senator Harrison's charge and the falsity of Senator Lodge's denial.

Borah for Member of Disarmament Conference?

Senator Harrison's suggestion that Senator Borah should be named by President Harding as a member of the disarmament conference will doubtless meet with the hearty approval of the American people, because it was Senator Borah, supported by the Democrats of the Senate and the House and fortified and sustained by a Democratic press that aroused public sentiment in favor of calling the conference to a point at which a Republican President and a Republican Congress did not dare longer to oppose it.

In commending Senator Borah for a place at the disarmament conference table Senator Harrison paid him the following tribute:

"But, Mr. President, whether people will agree with the appointment of the Secretary of State and the Senator from Massachusetts or not, I believe that the American people look to the President of the United States at this time to appoint one man above all others on this disarmament conference. He has been the commanding figure in the fight for limitation of armaments since the 3rd of last November. He has thrown his magnetic personality into the fight as no other man has. He has waged warfare on those who would bring in large Navy and Army appropriation bills, and he has won out. He has done more than anyone else in the last eight months to crystallize public sentiment in America for disarmament. You have not forgotten, Senators, that it was the distinguished senior Senator from Idaho (Mr. Borah) who offered his amendment to the naval bill months ago asking for a conference on disarmament. He received no sympathy from the other side of the aisle for his program, and not an iota of cooperation came from the White House to help him in the great fight he was making for disarmament."

A Sad and Disgraceful Spectacle.

The House of Representatives in all its history has rarely witnessed as sad and as disgraceful a specatacle as that made by Chairman Fordney of the great Ways and Means Committee of that body in presenting the Tax Revision bill, which should be the greatest economic measure of all times, but which, in its present form, is largely the handiwork of jugglery and political trickery.

Chairman Fordney's references to former President Wilson would have been in bad taste even in the Republican cloakroom, but made upon the floor of the House they were positively offensive. He did not desist until appealed to by Representative Garner, the minority spokesman, to leave an ill man alone and cease to "besmirch" his character. Chairman Fordney spoke of former President Wilson "strutting about Paris like a peacock", and gave an imitation of how he imagined the former President looked there. He said the former President took "two honeymoons" to Paris and attributed alleged war extravagance to Mr. Wilson's "desire for self-aggrandizement at the expense of the taxpayers." He charged that Mr. Wilson put the railroads under Federal control for political purposes, appointing his son-in-law to run them.

"Was that the reason you voted for the government taking over the railroads?" asked Mr. Garner.

"I voted to put the President in a hole, and we did," Mr. Fordney shouted.

Whether at the prompting of conscience or at the suggestions of colleagues, Mr. Fordney later said he "was only joking" when he made the remark about putting the President in a hole, from which the public can get Mr. Fordney's idea of a joke.

As Mr. Garner pointed out, Chairman Fordney devoted about ten minutes of his speech to the revenue bill and the balance of his long harangue to abuse of the Democratic party and personal attacks upon former President Wilson. It was a humuliating scene both for the House and the country.

Relief for the Rich Taxpayers

Representative Garner of the Ways and Means Committee (The Democratic members were not allowed to take part in the making of the bill) epitomized the iniquitous character of the tax revision bill when he said: "The whole bill is drawn in the interest of those who pay high taxes and against those who pay low taxes."

He exposed the reckless character of Chairman Fordney's statement that the railroads had cost the government under Federal control $4,000,000,000 by stating that the total appropriations for the roads had been $2,600,000,000. Mr. Garner also called attention to the fact that the express companies had been relieved of $17,000,000 in taxes, but that no taxes had been taken off the parcels post.

In line with the policy of the Democratic party to be constructive, Representative Garner submitted his plan for taxation, which in a nutshell, is that he would employ inheritance, personal and corporation income and tobacco taxes. The excess profits tax would be the last he would repeal.

Following Mr. Garner's speech, a Republican Congressman said to the writer: "If some one on our side doesn't answer Garner's speech we will be in a hole when it comes to explaining this bill to our constituents."

"Why don't you have somebody answer it?" I asked.

"I don't know whether we've got anybody on our side that can answer it," he replied.

Hoover's Paper Scores Complex Tax Law.

Bungling and lack of a programme have been charged against Republicans in the making of both the tariff and tax revision bills by Democratic spokesmen and in this correspondence, and the charge is now supported by an editorial in the Washington paper alleged to be owned and controlled in part by Herbert Hoover, who perhaps, is the best authority in such matters in the present Cabinet. But Mr. Hoover evidently is not consulted about such things, and if he is consulted, he is not heeded. Here is what his paper has to say about the bungling methods of making this tax bill and the confusion it will cause, especially to business men:

"The one extreme fault of the new revenue bill, as The Herald sees it, is the fact that it is not a bill for a new law, but a series of amendments of 20,000 words in the total. To make the law, one law, these two will have to be read, studied and construed together. Instead of simplifying, this will greatly complicate the law as a whole and make its construction more the work of a 'Philadelphia lawyer' and impossible to the average business man."

Why the committee chose this method rather than rewriting and making one complete act, is beyond any but Congressional ken. It should not be made more necessary than before to hire a lawyer to find what the tax is, even by a man of moderate income. It should not be made necessary to read the two laws together when they could be easily combined in one. Reference to sections, subdivisions of sections and the fact of amendment, which are all mystifying, would not appear and only the one document would have to be consulted.

"The amendments as offered by the committee, were published by the New York Times and fill eleven columns of small type set solid. To piece these amendments into the present law will will make an old fashioned New England patch-work quilt. In its form as amendments the bill will create a temper among taxpayers not favorable to the Congressional majority. The mere convolutions created will arouse hostility and profanity. All of this can be avoided by merely rewriting the law as a whole, really simplifying it as promised and not making it vastly more complex, as is now proposed."

Congressmen Are to Have a Country Club

Hard-working members of congress feel the need for a place where is rest and quiet, a place to spend a week end under the open, a place to golf, to fish, to swim, to hike or ride. A committee consisting of Representative Luhring of Indiana, Cole of Ohio, Fish of New York, and Bland of Indiana, "discovered" this old farm out along the Conduit road, 12 miles from the capitol, which has 405 acres of rolling, partly wooded land and a large 11-room house with three baths. They are now actively pushing a plan to turn it into a recreation club. Eventually a new club house will be built and the present structure fitted up for the ladies.

A Cleveland millionaire has been swindled out of two and a half million by a band of Chicago swindlers. A man who has brains enough to accumulate two and a half million dollars may or may not be subject to sympathy under such circumstances. Anyway, a lot of people will envy him his ability to lose that much money.

Heating the Home

AS NEW uses for petroleum products are developed, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) immediately organizes its distribution system to supply the demand, whenever and wherever it may arise.

For example, during the past two or three years a number of devices which substitute kerosene for coal in heating the home have been perfected and put on the market.

A large number of these burners have been installed in the territory served by this Company. The result has been a heavy demand for Perfection Kerosene, which has proved to be an ideal fuel.

To meet this demand for Perfection Kerosene, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has so arranged its distribution system as to be able to deliver to patrons Perfection Kerosene for heating purposes in any quantity which may be desired.

The bigness and efficiency of this organization enables you to adopt kerosene as a fuel for heating your home, with complete assurance that you always will be able to get this fuel in such quantities as you may require, whenever and wherever you may need it.

Thus does a big company, conscious of its responsibility to the public, and to its 19,478 stockholders, quickly adapt its organization to changing conditions.

One Mother

reading a newspaper

is better for the publisher and advertiser, than

Any Two Men

Why?—

First—Because SHE IS BETTER.

Second—Because the mothers spend the money, read advertising more carefully, because they are more economical.

Thus making advertising pay and making the newspaper pay.

The above statements were written by Arthur Brisbane, a nationally known newspaper man and appeared in the July issue of the magazine, "Circulation."

But the question has been asked by the Evansville (Ind.) Courier,

ARE MEN READING ADVERTISEMENTS MORE?

Writers of advertisements formerly said that they addressed their messages largely to women readers; they felt that women are more careful than men, are better planners, and hence would consider more attentively any suggestion calculated to help toward economical and substantial purchasing.

It has been a common experience since the war to find that men, too, were studying advertising with the same care that women have always given to it. Formerly men would inquire the price of an article and then pay it regardless of whether it seemed high or not; men have usually disliked to shop around for the things they wanted.

The experiences of the war period have led a great many men to feel quite differently about the matter. The pressure of high prices on limited incomes has been very severe, and multitudes of men who formerly never thought much about bargains have been impelled to examine newspaper advertising with great care in the hope of getting some help in their effort to keep living costs down.

Men are not merely studying the advertisements in regard to men's clothing and furnishings, but they are watching the publicity concerning household necessities and food, and frequently they call the attention of the wife to advertising that offers special values in women's and children's wear.

All this makes advertising more valuable to the merchant and enables him to increase his acquaintanceship with the buying public and expand the volume of his trade.

MAYBE BOTH ARE RIGHT.

Facts seem to indicate that mothers are reading the ads as much as they ever did and that the men are reading them more. THIS MEANS A WHOLE LOT TO THE MERCHANT. To the merchant who advertises it means greater returns on each advertising dollar spent. To the merchant who doesn't advertise it means that it is going to be much harder for him to secure business. When persons begin to study the advertisements for their wants, they gradually cease to patronize the merchant who doesn't advertise. It is the most natural thing for them to do.

The Merchant who is working for increased volume in Fall business will do well to add the Democrat-Forum's advertising columns to his sales-force

Late Entrants Into Twilight League Win Second Game Handily—Score 8 to 4.

The Railroaders won from the DeMolays in a baseball game on the college diamond last night by a score of 8 to 4. The defeat last night puts the DeMolays in the cellar of the Twilight League and makes the railroad men tied for first place with the butchers.

The lineups were: DeMolays—Keef, c; DeArmond, p; Eads, 1b Chick, 2b; Rowlett, ss; Penisten, 3b; Willoughby, rf; Gile, cf; Masters, lf.

THE HICKMAN BROS. CASE TO JURY TODAY AT ATLANTIC

Ellis G. Cook was a Witness for the Defense in the Case Yesterday —Acquittal Expected?

Ellis G. Cook returned last night from Atlantic, Ia., where he testified in the case of the state against Arthur and Een Hickman on trial there for the killing of Bert Patton, Page county deputy sheriff. Mr. Cook said he thought the case would go to the jury today and he was of the opinion that the brothers would be acquitted.

Evidence that the Hickman Brothers had admitted the crime was flatly contradicted by witnesses for the defense yesterday.

Two deputy sheriffs from Rock Port, who were present when Sheriff Harry Borland of Page county and two of the latter's deputies visited the Hickmans in jail at Rock Port, declared the Hickmans made no such admissions as had been attributed to them by Borland and his men.

The testimony of Sheriff Borland and his two deputy sheriffs as to the purported admissions of the Hickmans was considered one of the strongest links in the state's chain of evidence.

Aside from the refutation of the evidence regarding the admission of the Hickmans, the defense sought mainly to establish the fact of the possible killing of the deputy sheriff by one of the men who accompanied him to Bingham on the night of the killing, when the officer went in search of the Hickmans, wanted for the holdup of a craps shooting party at Shenandoah.

Bill Atwood, Shenandoah, member of Patton's posse, is the man on whom the defense seeks to fasten the death of Patton. The theory of the defense is that Atwood in his self-confessed excitement accidentally shot Patton.

Ellis G. Cook of Maryville and several others who were passengers on the train which carried the posse to Bingham, told of seeing Atwood on the train with a gun in his hand and said that he followed Patton off the train, but got back on immediately after two or more shots were fired.

Atwood, after getting back on the train ran the length of the car and appeared greatly wrought up, declared the witnesses. Witnesses for the defense also testified that the first shots heard in the gun battle were fired from beside the train just after Patton and Atwood got off.

This, the defense contends, proves that the posse opened fire and that the Hickmans, if they were in fact hiding behind a pile of ties, as is alleged, had the right under the law to defend themselves. Before beginning the offering of testimony, the defense moved for a directed verdict on the ground that the state had failed to prove which of the defendants, if either had killed Patton, and on the further ground the indictment was defective in that a woman was a member of the grand jury.

The motion was overruled by Judge Cullison.

U. S. HAS CORNER ON WORLD'S GOLD

ONE-THIRD OF ENTIRE STOCK IS ON AMERICAN SOIL

"MORE THAN WE NEED"

Other Countries are Unable to Buy What They Need and What We Need to Sell.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Uncle Sam's pockets bulge with gold. He has almost a "corner" on the world's supply. Treasury reports recently showed more than $3,000,000,000, or one-third of the entire stock of precious metal on the entire globe is on American soil.

With this enormous stock of gold in our possession the truth is dawning that we have more gold than is good for us if, as a nation, we want to maintain the integrity of the gold standard. Financiers are disturbed. Government fiscal experts say that the powerful position of the American dollar in international exchange is draining other countries of gold and it is flowing to America to pay for merchandise.

Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger, giving the results of an exhaustive sutdy of the situtation, said today that the great stream of gold actually threatens us with "gold inflation."

"More Than We Need".

Here is how the comptroller views the matter.

"We are accumulating more gold than we need. Other countries, by sending us their gold, are weakening their power to uphold the gold standard. The senders of this gold in large volume also lessen their ability to maintain as assured ratio of exchange and to buy what they need to use and we need to sell."

Earlier ideas of American financiers about the problem of exchange have undergone radical change since the great war. Until the war upset all previous systems a movement of gold in one direction and of products in the opposite direction was accepted as assurance of substantial stability in the relations of currencies.

There is not at this time a compensating movement of goods from America to the countries which are sending us their gold.

Fiscal experts continue to note the lack of freedom in commercial interchanges. In normal times such interchanges were a great equalizer and leveler in matters of international financing.

Gold Standard Threatened.

Government officials who are closest students of the problem said that the United States will be compelled to move along some line that may bring about exchange stabilization, or run the risk of seeing the gold standard gravely impaired.

Going back a few decades officials recalled that after our Civil War our own currency was impaired because of paper inflation. Other countries had drawn out a large part of America's gold. Thereby the currencies of foreign countries were more firmly established. At that period striking demonstration of America's economic capacity was shown by resumption of specie payments soon after the end of the war. Now the situation is reversed. Instead of suffering from a drought of gold we are inconvenienced by an over-supply, as relates to our ability to maintain international trade connections, which are logically American.

There are more advocates of the creation of an international currency medium for purposes of international trade. There are also many opponents to such a plan. Many American leaders believe that such a plan would operate to the disadvantage of America in the end.

U. S. Should Co-operate.

Others, however, contend that, with other foreign powers discriminating against the United States for the reason that American money is so much more expensive than theirs, the United States should become a participant in some international scheme to stabilize exchange.

American business is vitally affected by any plan that will stabilize exchange. American manufacturers are seeing contracts go to the nationals of other countries having lower currency values. It is now virtually impossible for Americs to bid against other countries in many lines of important commodities because their currencies are at a great discount, as compared with American money values.

An earnest advocate of some international plan of currency stabilization is Comptroller Crissinger. It is his view that American business men and financiers must give serious consideration to measures of this sort to assure resumption of normal production, to regain the fields of trade opportunity now closed in favor of cheaper price competitors, and in order to bring about financial and industrial equilibrium over the world.

HEALTH NUGGETS.

Summer for health and some-r not, says the U. S. Public Health Service. Look out for typhoid fever on your vacation.

Buy your health in advance, says the U. S. Public Health Service, and you won't even know you are paying for it. Good solid dependable health was never cheaper than it is today.

"Sure cures" for tuberculosis are probably as old as the disease itself, says the U. S. Public Health Service. Hypophosphites, creosote, "lymph," inhalants, serum and the Friedman cure have all come—and gone. Just now some old devices in new forms are being acclaimed in the southwest. But "I can't say yet what medicine cured me," said the testimonial writer. "I ain't heard from but three sure-cure companies yet an' I'm waiting for bids from the advertising agents of two more."

More and more, disease is being cured before it begins, says the U. S. Public Health Service. Typhus, which drove Napoleon from Moscow and destroyed his army, is now being wiped out by soap and hot water. Smallpox, once classed with measles as a deadly but inevitable child's disease, is being ended with tiny tubes vaccine. Lead poisoning in potteries is being markedly checked by the workmen eating outside their workrooms and washing the lead glaze off their hands before eating at all. Children by thousands are being saved from slow starvation by attention to their teeth, which enables them to eat and to digest their food. Wherever modern public health work is in progress, lives are longer and safer than they were.

Infancy and childhood are the danger periods for tuberculosis, says the U. S. Public Health Service. To protect your child, pasteurize the milk or use certified milk; protect infants and young children from contact with the sick; and keep the growing child strong and well by seeing that it drinks milk, eats vegetables, avoids excessive fatigue, and gets enough sleep.

Personal responsibility for the transmission of venereal disease has been upheld by both civil and criminal courts, says the U. S. Public Health Service. In Oklahoma a man has been sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for infecting a girl with syphilis. In Nebraska the court upheld a doctor who warned a hotel keeper that one of his patients, a guest at the hotel, had syphilis and had refused treatment and was consequently a menace to the public health. In North Carolina a woman has been awarded $10,000 damages against her husband for a similar infection, and the Supreme court upheld the judgment.

The return to the War Risk Bureau of the responsibility for so many former soldier patients whose care the exigencies of war compelled the U. S. Public Health Service to assume some two years ago is already enabling the latter to give more of its energy to its traditional work of attending to quarantine; conducting scientific research into important problems of the prevention and cure of disease, particularly those to which industrial workers are subject; cooperating with the State health officers to control epidemics, and developing effective methods to meet the problems of rural sanitation, venereal disease, child hygiene and so on.

The opening of wards in general hospitals to tuberculosis patients will, says the U. S. Public Health Service, be of enormous benefit not only to the two million declared victims of the disease in the United States, but also to thousands of others in whom the disease is still easily suppressible. Many of these fear the stigma of an avowed tuberculosis hospital, and put off going to it until recovery has become long and difficult. In a general hospital they could be easily placed in separate wards so as to protect other patients and the diagnosis of their disease kept private.

A concerted effort is being made by the U. S. Public Health Service and the National Park Service, to make the National Parks of the United States safe and sanitary for the vast numbers of Americans who have recently taken to touring them. Before the war, when tourists were fewer and most of them travelled on stage lines and stayed at park hotels, the sanitary problem was simple. Since the war, however, the great majority travel in automobiles and camp out, enormously complicating all health matters.

That rats desert a sinking ship is proverbial. But it now appears that they berth in life boats, as if in preparation for sinking. Of 100 rats destroped by fumigation on a steamship arriving at San Francisco, says the U. S. Public Health Service, 89 were killed in the four life boats.

The high price of arsphenamine (salvarsan) is a constant incentive to marketing useless fake substitutes, says the U. S. Public Health Service. Large quantities of such have recently been detected in New York City and elsewhere. These products should not be bought from unknown persons. The Public Health Service also renews its advice against the use of any arsphenamine not licensed and regularly tested by the Hygienic Laboratory of the Service.

Mrs. William Froyd and children, Lawrence and Margaret, left Wednesday night for their home in Washington, D. C., after spending the summer here with Mrs. Froyd's mother, Mrs. Mary Jensen. Mrs. Froyd was called here by the illness of her father, Andrew Jensen, and her sister, Mrs. Lehman Hansen, both of whom died.

CIGARETTE RAID IN KANSAS BRINGS SUIT

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 26.—As a result of a "coffin-nail" raid here recently in which officers searched over thirty stores for cigarettes, the Kansas Anti-Cigarette League faces a suit for $5,000 damages.

G. M. Jamison, cafe proprietor, asserts that the raiding squad entered his place of business, caused a big commotion, but didn't find a single "pill."

Seventeen dealers who were found with cigarettes among their wares pleaded guilty and were fined $50.

It is against the State law to sell cigarettes in Kansas, and getting a "deck" of the "ready mades" entails the same exchange of "high signs" as a transaction in bootleg whiskey does in other States.

Good Refrigeration

is essential to good meats. We do not have to depend on melting ice to keep our meats.

We have a refrigeration system that keeps the large refrigerator at a certain even temperature all the time. It operates the same as an ice making machine, except that it produces cold air without first freezing water to ice and then allowing it to melt.

This cooling system is the most advanced system in refrigeration. It is of invaluable assistance to us in KEEPING THE QUALITY UP.

his country who wake up hungry every morning and that means that there is a market for the farmers products and the money he gets from the sale of these products help to put business on it's feet as well as to help the farmer pay his debts.

"Therefore, everything indicates that we are probably past the worst for all kinds of business and particularly for the farmer.

"The farmer is pulling himself out of a hole. Nobody doubts that the farmer is in a hole; in fact, all kinds of business is in a hole. The farmer went in first and is, therefore, in deepest. He pulled other business in with him by ceasing to buy. This meant that forty per cent of the best customers went out of the market. This caused factories to close and business to take a drop.

Prices Must be Leveled.

"The farmer will be the first to come out of the hole and he will pull the other fellow out with him. We will have reasonable conditions whenever prices become equalized. When the other things come down or when the farmer's products come up, then will products be equalized. Until freight rates, interest rates, and all elements that come into the cost of production and the cost of living come down or the products of the farmer come up, prices will not be equalized. The other fellow had just as well make up his mind to get the farmer back in the market, for by so doing they can shorten the period of business stagnation.

"The farmer was never more interested than now in a better way of marketing his products. Here's what he is trying to do. The farmer isn't talking about adding to the cost of production after it goes to the market. He has been in the habit of selling his products at his front door and then three or four other men pass it around and each takes a profit. The farmer is going to organize and takes these profits for himself.

"He has learned how to produce all he can sell and still not be busy, so he has idle time on his hands and he is going to put in his time in merchandizing his products and put the speculators' profits in his own pockets.

"He is setting up organizations to do this through cooperative elevators, shipping associations for live stock, and terminal sales agencies at the main markets, so that he will own his products until they reach the market. That is the big movement that has arisen out of this war.

"I advise the farmers to organize for the transaction of their own business and to adopt the same methods of selling as the other big businesses, such as the U. S. Steel Corporation, the Standard Oil and the packers."

Henry's Young Grandmother

By R. RAY BAKER

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Alice Trover's heart was heavy as she turned from the window where, shielded by a curtain, she had watched Henry Gordon disappear round a corner of the street.

She dropped into a chair and picked up a magazine. The cover represented and insipid young woman carrying a parasol and a dog, looking in rapture over a fence at a stack of hay. The cover oppressed Alice, so she turned to the back and absently began reading an advertisement in colors.

"Discovered! The Elixir of Youth!" ran the headline of the advertisement in bright red letters. And a subtitle below it was:

"Why Have Wrinkles? Use Sylvia Hall's Carmine Cold Cream and Banish Signs of Age and Worry."

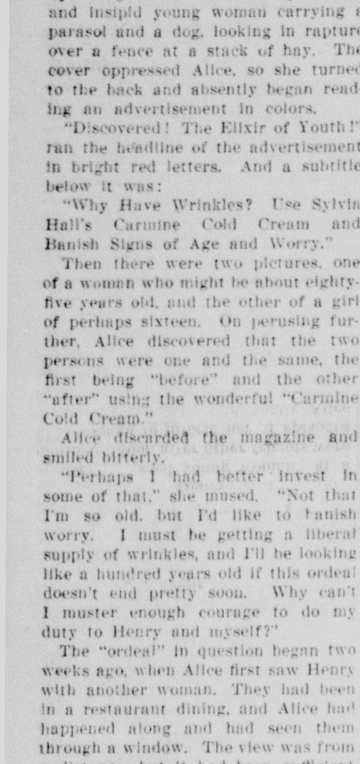
Then there were two pictures, one of a woman who might be about eighty-five years old, and the other of a girl of perhaps sixteen. On perusing further, Alice discovered that the two persons were one and the same, the first being "before" and the other "after" using the wonderful "Carmine Cold Cream."

Alice discarded the magazine and smiled bitterly.

"Perhaps I had better invest in some of that," she mused. "Not that I'm so old, but I'd like to banish worry. I must be getting a liberal supply of wrinkles, and I'll be looking like a hundred years old if this ordeal doesn't end pretty soon. Why can't I muster enough courage to do my duty to Henry and myself?"

The "ordeal" in question began two weeks ago, when Alice first saw Henry with another woman. They had been in a restaurant dining, and Alice had happened along and had seen them through a window. The view was from a distance, but it had been sufficient to convince Alice that her rival was young and good looking.

She waited for Henry to speak of the matter, but he did not mention it.



She Had Watched Henry Gordon.

Inasmuch as he had been engaged to Alice for a year, it would have been the proper thing for him to explain himself, she thought.

Alice was willing to let it drop, only the very next day Jennie Quaites, who worked with her in the shoe manufacturer's office, came to her with a story of having seen Henry with "a very stylishly dressed young woman" at a matinee. Soon after other friends were kind enough to inform her of episodes of a similar nature, and finally Alice again saw the pair herself at the same restaurant, through the same window.

Then she decided she must act. She could no longer keep Henry's ring. He had fallen in love with another girl, and his own sense of duty was preventing him from stepping out of Alice's life. That was the way Alice figured it.

Three times after Alice had made that decision Henry called on her, and three times she had tried to act as she had planned. But she cared so much for him, and he treated her so much as he always had that she could not bring herself to the climax of their romance that she had determined upon.

Finally, in desperation, Alice sought the advice of her aunt, who was worldly wise and versed in matters of the heart, having had three husbands and survived them all. She found her aunt performing her toilet and making profuse use of some crimson, paste-like substance which she took from a large jar.

"Making myself young again," explained the aunt, rubbing the oily substance into her face. "This is Sylvia Hall's Carmine Cream, which restores youth, banishes old age and wrinkles. You won't know me when I get made up. I think I'll try my hand at matrimony again when I have camouflaged the traces of Father Time's scythe."

She refused to become serious when Alice related her tale of woe.

"There's only one of two things to do," advised the aunt. "Hand him his ring and forget about him (what's one man more or less? There's plenty of them.) Or get busy and beat out this other woman that has stolen his affections. This may sound terribly slangy, but that's the result of the youth restorer getting in its work."

"But I love him too much to let him go, even though it's my duty," protested Alice, "and I can't bring myself to entering in a contest for his affections, especially when I've had them all to myself for so long."

"Better think it over, then," said the aunt. "You have my advice, and it's the best I can give. Better let him take the initiative, if you can't do it yourself."

"I must, though. It's my plain duty to break off our engagement and let Henry and this other woman enjoy happiness. I'll do it next time I see him, in spite of the inclination of my heart."

And Alice took her leave, while her aunt muttered something about "heart, affections—rot!" and resumed lathering her face.

While Alice was passing the window however, the aunt appeared to have been struck with an idea, for she called:

"Alice, I just happend to think of something. Perhaps this other woman is Henry's sister, or cousin, or—or his mother. You never can tell these days, you know. Wait till you see me after this restorer gets in its fine work."

"No, it can't be," Alice rejoined. "Henry has no sisters or cousins. I know that to be a fact! and his mother is dead."

"Too bad, then. I thought perhaps I'd solved the puzzle. Well, good-by; and don't lose any sleep and get a lot of worry wrinkles."

At the dinner hour the next day Alice could not keep away from the restaurant where her troubles of the heart had begun. She had no intention of spying, but she simply must know if "that affair" was continuing.

Evidently it was, for through the window Alice saw Henry and the fashionably garbed woman she had almost learned to hate. Apparently they had dined earlier than usual, for Henry was paying the cashier and the lady was waiting for him. She carried a pink parasol, and all she needed, Alice thought, to duplicate the insipid picture on the front of a magazine was to have a dog nestled under her arm and a stack of hay at which to gaze in rapture.

"She's a silly looking young thing," the watcher remarked, and started away, determined not to be seen.

But she was seen. Henry spied her as he turned from the cashier's desk. Immediately he waved to her, and linking his arm through that of the other woman he strode to the door.

"Good evening, Alice," he said, doffing his hat and drawing the other woman toward his fiancee.

"Good evening," Alice responded coldly.

"I'd like you to meet a very celebrated lady," Henry went on. "You've read lots about her, no doubt, for her name is in all the magazines. Women are blessing her in every part of the globe for the good service she is performing for hem. Alice, this is Sylvia Hall, the inventor and manufacturer of the famous 'Carmine Cream,' that has banished age for so many, including herself. She's a living advertisement of her wares, as you can see for yourself. And," he finished proudly, "she's my only living relative. Alice, my fiancee—my grandmother."

DIPLOMATS IN GAUDY DRESS

Uniforms Worn Long Ago by American Representatives Abroad Had No Note of Simplicity.

With the early life of the Republic we are inclined to associate the idea of Jeffersonian simplicity in all forms, yet in 1817 the accepted uniform of the American diplomatic service was as follows, according to the Literary Digest: Blue coat lined with white silk; straight standing cape embroidered with gold, single-breasted, straight or round buttonholes, slightly embroidered; buttons plain, or if they can be had, with white silk; straight standing upon them, i. e., an eagle flying with a wreath in its mouth, grasping lightning in its talons; cuffs embroidered in the manner of the cape; white cashmere breeches; gold knee-buckles; white silk stockings and gold or gilt shoe-buckles. A three-cornered cheapeau bras, not so large as those worn by the French nor so small as those worn by the English. A black cockade to which, lately, an eagle has been attached. Sword, etc., corresponding.

Then Andrew Jackson became President, and the uniform was modified for economy and to be better "adapted to the simplicity of our institutions," and finally, in 1853, there went forth the recommendation to ministers to confine themselves to the "simple dress of an American citizen," a recommendation which, we are told, produced "a terrible uproar in Europe."

When Doctors Disagree.

"What did the doctors decide upon at the consulation?"

"The surgeon advised an operation."

"Did they all agree with him?"

"No. The osteopath insisted upon osteopath treatments; the electrical man thought electricity necessary; the throat specialist recommended his treatment, so we decided to stick to the family doctor since we couldn't give them all a chance."

Poor.

"Here's a pass for two. Take your girl to the theater tonight."

"Sorry, mister, but I can't accept your generosity."

"Why not?"

"I can't afford the price of the meal she'd expect after the show."—Detroit Free Press.

Making War By Wireless Is Now Beyond Experiment Stage

By Harry L. Rogers
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—"Mother, take in your service flag, for this is a wireless war!"

In some such manner will the Doughboy's derisive gibe at those who saw service behind the lines have to be amended in the next war if time bears out the predictions of naval and military experts as to the part radio is to play in the conflicts of the future.

Destroyers without a soul on board, manouvring at full speed in battle formation; battle cruisers zig-zagging with lightning-like swiftness to escape the bomb of a pilotless airplane or the unseen torpedo of a crewless submarine; whole fleets of dreadnoughts, whose monster guns, aimed by mechanical hands, belch forth tons of steel at other squadrons of electrically manipulated war craft—this is the naval warfare of the future, as it is glimpsed by the eye of scientific possibility, from the not inconsiderable height of present day achievement.

On land the radio controlled airplane or dirigible may operate even more easily than at sea. Carrying its death dealing load of bombs or poison gas, which the pressing of a button a hundred miles away may release, it could soar over enemy cities, compelling surrender of their inhabitants by the mere threat of the destruction it might wreak. Should armies ever get within striking distance of each other huge tanks, laden with tons of high explosive might be guided by radio into the enemy lines and there exploded by closing a contact switch in the control station far in the rear.

A few years ago such prophesies would have been hailed as absurd and ridiculous. Today they are accepted as possibilities, even probabilities of the future and the not very distant future at that.

Navy Department experts have been working on problems of radio control for many months and have made notable progress, as was evidenced by the performance of the radio-controlled battleship Iowa during the recent bombing tests off the Atlantic coast. Army engineers, too, are giving intense study to the subject.

What army experts think of the future of radio in warfare is shown in an official statement concerning the progress of experiments now being conducted at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio.

"The possibilities of radio control and its application to war time problems are almost without number," says the statement. "Radio control can be applied to any mechanical apparatus that moves, whether it be in the air, on the ground, on the surface of the water, or beneath the water. Huge land tanks may be constructed and filled with TNT and driven to any desired point along the enemy's lines, where the explosive can be fired by means of radio, or it can be applied in a similar manner to a boat, submarine, torpedo, or even an airplane, and the explosive can be fired when and where desired."

Recent visitors at McCook Field have been astonished at the gyrations of a brightly-painted, three-wheeled vehicle which has been dashing to and fro between the buildings and among the airplanes on the field, under no visible means of control. It is often seen to approach a group of persons, its horn tooting wildly, and then, when apparently about to strike them, to stop short, back, turn sharply to right or left and then speed off in the opposite direction.

The movements of the car are controlled entirely by radio impulses sent out from the station at the lower end of the flying field. The fact that no aerial or antenna system is visible adds to the mystification of the uninitiated.

The car is of cigar shaped construction, about eight feet long, and runs on three pneumatic tired wheels. Its speed ranges from four to ten miles an hour, and the controls are so nicely adjusted as to make steering along a narrow roadway an easy matter.

An examination of the interior of the car shows an amazing collection of batteries, switches, wires, vacuum tubes, potentiometers, relays and magnetos, all of which are necessary to a complete control of the apparatus. The "brain" of the mechanism is the selector. Various combinations of dots and dashes are sent out from the control station by means of a specially constructed transmitter, each combination calling for the accomplishment of a certain operation of the control apparatus.

It is the function of the "selector" to decode these various combination of dots and dashes and to close the circuits to the desired controls. So delicately is the "selector" constructed and so rapidly will it operate that it is possible to put in operation any of twelve distinct controls in a period of less than one second. That is to say, less than one second elapsed from the time any push button on the automatic transmitter at the distant radio station is pressed until the control on the car is functioning. Such speed of control has never before been accomplished. The car has been controlled equally well from an airplane and from a ground transmitting station.

The proceedings of the disarmament conference, it is said will not be entirely in the open but as much so as possible, whatever that may mean. The more open they are the better the people will be pleased and very likely the better they will be served. The day of bartering away the rights and property of nations in secret has passed we hope.

CHILDREN MUST GO TO SCHOOL, SAYS THE LAW

County Officers are Going to Be Asked by State to See That All Children Attend.

Jefferson City, Aug. 26.—In an effort to have strict enforcement of the state laws with regard to children of school age attending school, during the coming year, State Superintendent Baker has asked Attorney General Barrett for an opinion with reference to the recommendations of truancy officers by the county superintendents and the salary that must be paid such officers. The opinion of the Attorney General has been submitted to all county superintendents in the state in a letter sent out this week by Superintendent Baker.

County officers may be forced by legal proceeding to pay county truancy officers a proper salary as recommended by the county superintendent, in the opinion of Attorney General Barrett. Superintendent Baker stated that in some counties the court has voted to pay the truancy officer's salary of 1 cent a day, which is merely for the purpose of being within the law.

State Superintendent Baker said that it is his intention to have the truancy laws enforced this year and that truancy officers cannot be expected to do proper work if they are merely figure-heads. He sent the letter to all county superintendents at this time as a preliminary move before the fall term of school opens, that the superintendents may be prepared for the carrying out of the state law.

The opinion of Attorney General Barrett follows:

"This section of the state law has never been passed upon by the courts of this state and we have no court opinion to guide us herein, yet it is the opinion of this department that the Legislature had in mind that the attendance officer should be selected and paid for his services upon the recommendation of the superintendent and evidently it was not intended that the county courts could destroy the effect of the law by placing the salary at such an amount as one cent per day.

"Therefore, we are of the opinion that if the county superintendent makes the selection of the attendance officer and makes the recommendation as to hi ssalary within the limits fixed by the statute, and the attendance officer performs the work as required by law, then in that event the county court would be forced by proper proceedings at law to pay for the services as recommended by the county superintendent."

EDITOR GOODEN SELLS THE PARNELL SENTINEL

In Charge of the Parnell Paper for 21 Years—Will go Back to Sheridan.

The Sentinel at Parnell was sold this week by L. C. Gooden & Son. In their announcement, the following statement was made:

After an ownership of over twenty-one years, the Sentinel passes into the hands of E. O. Stipe of Clarinda, Iowa. While Mr. Stipe is not a practical newspaper man, the Sentinel will be ably conducted by Mr. C. Bogan, who comes from Clarinda, also. Mr. Bogan has been in the job printing business at Clarinda for the last fourteen years and only recently sold.

We purchased the Sheridan Advance from Mr. Stipe, which we expect to conduct after next week. Over twenty-three years ago we conducted the Sheridan Advance and now we are going back to the same paper.

In the deal Mr. Stipe gets the building and contents, also the opera house and contents. We get in exchange 240 acres of land in Iowa and the Sheridan Advance. Whether Mr. Stipe or ourselves have bettered each other is for the future to tell. It is hoped both have.
